The building of Het Loo began in the late 17th century, under the reign of William III of Orange. Initially a game lodge, it was progressively enlarged and metamorphosed into a opulent palace showing the increasing power and influence of the Dutch monarchy. The mansion's architecture is a brilliant combination of different styles, including elements of Dutch Classicism, French Baroque, and even some touches of Italian influences. The inner embellishments are equally stunning, showcasing beautiful furniture, paintings, and various items demonstrating the opulence and refinement of the era.

The parkland of Het Loo are just as noteworthy as the palace itself. Designed in the formal French style, they include geometric layouts, elaborate flower beds, sculptures, and cascades. However, the gardens have undergone significant changes over the centuries. Under later monarchs, features of the English landscape garden style were incorporated, resulting in a unique and unified combination of both formal and informal elements. The outcome is a captivating panorama of vibrant greenery, serene waterways, and fascinating architectural details.
